Separation of Powers

Suggested Student Activities

- 1. Have your class read the newspaper daily for issues involving the separation of powers on the state or national level. Discuss the issues as they unfold. Have the students decide which branch should have the ultimate authority over the situation.
- 2. Divide the class into several groups. Assign each group one separation of powers issue (remember that state law forbids the discussion of abortion in class). Have the group conduct research on the topic and prepare a visual presentation on the issue. Have the group present their visual presentation to the class.
- 3. Identify court cases that involve separation of powers issues. Have students research those cases and write a report on the case had how it relates to the concept of separation of powers.
- 4. Invite a judge or lawyer to speak to your class on separation of powers issues. Have students write a reaction paper to thoughts presented by the guest speaker.
- 5. Divide students into several groups. Assign each group a political theorist like Montesquieu or Hume to research. Have the groups focus on the concept of separation of powers in the research and have them present their findings to the class.
